

Serena Dye

Why is America now better after the overturn of Roe?

My Reason for Celebrating Dobbs

As a woman hurt by abortion, I celebrate Dobbs and the overturn of Roe v. Wade, because less and less women are experiencing the injustice, pain and trauma of abortion that I experienced. At 15 years old, I was forced to have an abortion, and no one at the abortion facility tried to counsel and advise me from what was happening. My ultrasound was concealed from me, I was misinformed about fetal development, being told that my baby was more like an alien at my gestation, and the abortionist did not even look at me or speak to me- he just performed the abortion and left the room. My experience with abortion was the farthest thing from safe reproductive healthcare for women, and I was left to deal with the heartache and aftermath of the abortion all by myself. I suffered in silence for years....so, when I think of Roe being overturned, I think of all the women who won't be suffering in silence because they will be receiving the real medical care and help that they need in the time of an unplanned pregnancy.

It is estimated that since the overturn of Roe, roughly 30,000 lives have been saved. That's a significant number- equaling a whole city or even a large college campus. America is a better place with the overturn of Roe because we are beginning to uphold the sanctity of life from the highest law of the land. We are seeing babies celebrate their first birthdays because states are offering better healthcare and resources to women. We are seeing " life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness” come alive because we are rebuilding a culture of life in our nation.

I look forward to the day approaching when abortion will be erased from our nation altogether, and kids will merely learn about the modern-day holocaust of abortion in their history textbooks. God bless you, and God bless America. Safe Haven is a far better alternative to abortion than killing your child and bringing devastating grief to yourself.